Fairbanks' Widow Gets $1,000,000 And Son $600,000, Will Reveals

Other Bequests Total $500,000; Mary Pickford, Actor's Second Wife, Not Mentioned, Nor Is the First Mrs. Fairbanks, Mother of Douglas Jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(P)—Douglas Fairbanks left $1,000,000 to his widow, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, of England, and $600,000 to his son, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., the filing of his will in surrogates' court disclosed today.

Other bequests, all to individuals with one exception, totaled approximately $500,000. The value of the estate was not given since it has yet to be appraised. Unofficially, it was estimated at more than $2,000,000.

His will, executed November 2, 1936, a short time after he married Lady Ashley, mentioned neither Mary Pickford, his second wife, nor his first wife, the mother of Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Fairbanks' first bequest was one of $10,000 to the motion picture actors' relief fund of Los Angeles to be known as the "Douglas Fairbanks fund."

Then he directed that of the residue the sum of $2,000,000 be divided as follows:

"Twenty-fourths . . . to my beloved wife, Sylvia Fairbanks, if then living, her heirs and assigns forever, such amount not to exceed $1,000,000."

"Twelve-fourths . . . to my beloved son, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., his heirs and assigns forever, such amount not to exceed $600,000." Other bequests went to relatives.

COMMAND OF FLEET WILL CHANGE TODAY

Admiral Richardson To Take Over at San Pedro Ceremony.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Jan. 5.—(P)—A tall, bronzed friendly Texan, who loves flowers and knows about men, machines, and ships, takes command of the United States fleet tomorrow.

He is Admiral James Otis Richardson, 61, who went to the naval academy from Paris, Texas, 41 years ago.

After considerable firing of saluting guns on the dreadnaughts in the harbor here this six-footer will walk down the quarterdeck of the battleship Pennsylvania as fleet commander-in-chief, and give a farewell handshake to Admiral Claude Charles Bloch.

Bloch goes ashore as rear admiral, after two years in command of the fleet. He will proceed to Washington for conferences before going to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, in April to assume command of the Fourteenth naval district.

It is a colorful ceremony, this change in command of one of the world's most powerful naval forces, some 250 fighting and auxiliary ships and nearly 1,000 fighting airplanes.

BISHOP O'HARA SHOWS ADDED IMPROVEMENT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5.—(P)—Continued improvement of Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara, of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese of the Catholic church, was noted by hospital attendants here today.

He was hospitalized here Monday with an attack of grippe, while on a visit to his old home.

Jackson Day Dinner Headquarters' Staff, Victims of Prank, Blame 'Low Republican'

They Cover the Phones With Towels and Wait for Dust.

By WILLARD COPE.
Things were riding along on a reasonably even keel yesterday at the Jackson Day dinner headquarters, 515 Henry Grady hotel, when it happened.

Democrats of high and low degree, candidates, hopefuls, non-committals, listeners, and pulse-feel—statesmen all—were putting their $25 each on the barrel-head for the great gathering of Georgia's patriots Monday night about the festive board.

One of the telephones rang. "Yes, this is the Jackson Day dinner headquarters," responded Mrs. Dawn Dillard, the charming official hostess. "What can we do for you?"

She listened intently for a moment while typewriters ceased their clatter and the various feminine staff members waited expectantly.

"What?" she questioned. Then, "Ooo-ooh!"

"That's right," said a masculine voice over the telephone. "This is the service department of the telephone company. We are getting ready to blow out your telephones. We want to give you plenty of time to cover them to keep the dust from flying all over the room."

"Oh, thank you," returned the hostess, appreciatively. "We'll put towels over them right away. Give us just a moment."

She replaced the telephone. Instantly there was a scurrying for towels. The feminine contingent carefully wrapped each of the five telephones.

They waited. They continued to wait. Nothing happened.

Finally, the truth flashed over them.

"Shucks!" observed one commentator, neatly summing up the general view. "It was just some low Republican."

HERTY MEMORIAL MUSEUM PLANNED

Waycross Sponsors Suggest Library, Forest Honoring Genius.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P)—Plans have been proposed here for a museum, library and memorial forest to keep alive the memory of Dr. Charles H. Herty, who proved paper can be made from southern pine and brought $200,000,000 of new industry to this region.

The museum and library, to be located at Waycross, and the forest will be joined with an educational program to stimulate forestry and allied industries as the Herty Memorial Institute.

Addressing a banquet to launch subscriptions to a $50,000 Herty memorial fund, W. T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph and News, described Waycross, "center of the pine territory," as the logical center of the memorial.

Anderson reviewed Herty's scientific career, particularly his pulp and paper research at Savannah. He asserted close attention should be paid to the late scientist's conservation doctrine, for Georgia "has a billion and a half dollars' worth of timber and cordwood on 23,000,000 acres without a cent of insurance and very little fire protection."

Jack Williams, editor of the Journal-Herald, legislator and former president of the State Press Association, introduced Anderson.

Others speaking included George M. Bazemore, vice president of the Herty Foundation; Elliott Reed, of Savannah, secretary-treasurer; Jim Fowler, of Soperton, chairman of the trustees; and William Allen, technical director of the Herty laboratory at Savannah.

AGREEMENT FORECAST IN SHOOTING OF SENTRY

PEIPING, Jan. 5.—(P)—"An amicable settlement" of an incident in which an American marine sentry shot and slightly wounded a Japanese military gendarme was predicted tonight in a communique issued jointly by Japanese and American military authorities here.

The incident occurred early today in the compound of the United States embassy guard. An unofficial source said that the Japanese was discovered attempting to scale the compound wall and that he failed to halt when challenged by the sentry.

MORE BUY TICKETS FOR JACKSON DAY

Goodrich, sponsor of the Griffin "51-a-plate" dinner.

"Judge Goodrich's wife read: 'We are holding Griffin Jackson Day dinner to raise money to pay for ticket to Atlanta. Local committee hereby underwrites one ticket and will remit net proceeds of Griffin dinner.'"

Plans for dinners in Griffin and Macon materialized after Editor Millwee Owens, of the Augusta Herald, and Editor W. T. Anderson, of the Macon Telegraph, said they would stay away from the Atlanta dinner and hold one for "poor but honest" Democrats in Macon.

700 Expected.

Plans for the Atlanta dinner Monday night at the Ansley hotel, where a meal will be served to an expected 700 Georgia Democrats, include a Jackson Day address by Colonel Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war and former national commander of the American Legion.

Net proceeds of the Atlanta dinner will go to the coffers of the Democratic party. Indications point to a sell-out of seats at the Ansley dinner, assuring the party of a substantial contribution in the hour of need created by the approaching national elections.

Although sponsors of the "51-a-plate" dinner at Macon have given as their reason a desire to "save Democracy" by remaining away from the Atlanta dinner, Major Howell and his associates in the state committee have made it clear from the beginning that the Atlanta dinner will bar factionalism and all Georgia Democrats will meet on an equal footing in the common interests of their party.

Major Howell has emphasized the harmony motif of the dinner, declaring to his fellow Democrats, "It's as much your party as it is mine."

Colonel Johnson will be honored by Governor Rivers at a 9 o'clock breakfast Monday morning at the Henry Grady hotel. Guests will include Lieutenant General Stanley D. Embick, commanding the fourth corps area, and other high-ranking regular army officers.

Chef Samuel B. Morgan, of the Hotel Dempsey, was quoted yesterday as promising that food served at the Macon dinner "may not be fancy but there will be plenty of it."

The Macon menu would include, he said:

Vegetable soup, made from Georgia vegetables, Georgia-grown cucumber pickles, Georgia banner hams, baked, with grits and candied yams, and a side dish of turnip greens, Georgia-grown cabbage made into a salad and Georgia frosted peaches made into peach shortcake.

Former United States Senator Thomas Hardwick will speak at the Macon dinner.

Mills, Crackers Will Be Repast Of Republicans

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 5.—(P)—As a counter attraction to the $25-a-plate Jackson Day dinner of Indiana Democrats Monday night, the Republicans are going to have a 25-cent milk and cracker feast honoring Abraham Lincoln.

Ralph Hamill, chairman of the Young Republicans of Marion county (Indianapolis), sponsor of the two-bit affair, explained the holding of a Lincoln meeting in January this way:

"With all this date-changing on the calendar, we have a sneaking suspicion they might change Lincoln's birthday or even eliminate it. For that reason we decided to hold this meeting on Jackson Day, which we know good and well the Democrats won't change."

JUDGE ETHERIDGE DENIES BRACKETT OUSTER CHARGES

General Reply Contends
No Election Held To Fill Thomas' Term;
Hearing Is Postponed.

Contending that no election has been held at which a successor to the late Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton county superior court, could be designated, Judge Anton L. (Jack) Etheridge, appointed by Governor Rivers to fill Judge Thomas' unexpired term, yesterday filed an answer to proceedings started by Claud F. Brackett, Atlanta attorney, to unseat him.

Augustine Sams, former law partner of Judge Etheridge, filed a general answer which denied every material fact in Brackett's action, which was filed by George Finch, attorney.

In addition, a general demurrer was filed, which sought to quash the entire action without the formality of a hearing set for 9 o'clock next Thursday morning by a three-judge tribunal composed of Fulton County Superior Court Judges John D. Humphries, Edgar E. Pomeroy and Virlyn B. Moore.

Hearing Postponed.

Hearing on the case was at first set for Monday morning, but was postponed until Thursday.

Sams pointed out last night that the answer "denies all material facts except that the office was vacated by the death of Judge Thomas and that Judge Etheridge was appointed to fill the unexpired term, which runs until December 31, 1940."

The answer, filed without waiving the demurrer, also sets out that no election "has been held in the state at which such an office could be legally filled."

It expressly denies that the election on June 6, at which Brackett contends he received the highest number of write-in votes and thus is entitled to be declared judge, constituted an election "at which judges of the superior court could be elected" and denies that "any such election was in fact held."

Cites Write-Ins.

Brackett contends that he received the highest number of write-in ballots cast for the post despite the fact that the position was not listed on the ballot in the election. He, therefore, is asking the courts to oust Judge Etheridge and declare him judge.

In failing to place the position on the ballot, Judge Thomas H. Jeffries, Fulton county ordinary, followed an opinion given by the county legal staff, which ruled with Attorney General Ellis Arnall that the post was not before the electorate at that time.

EAST POINT COUNCIL VOTES PAY RAISES

Mayor and Six Members
Double Own Salaries;
Others Up 5 Per Cent.

Mayor J. R. Parham and the six members of the East Point city council doubled their own salaries in the 1940 budget as they voted about 60 municipal employees 5 per cent salary increases aggregating $4,000 a year, it was learned yesterday.

Under the new schedule, the seven 100 per cent salary increases will cost $2,400 a year, which added to the $4,000 allowed other employees, pushes the grand total to $6,400 annually, R. L. Cole, city clerk, said.

The increases for the mayor and council were made in accordance with a "permissive" bill passed by the last session of the Georgia legislature. Mayor Parham said the "salaries of the executive branch are now where they should have been all the time."

Council members whose salaries were increased from $25 a month to $50 a month are: E. A. Sims, R. E. Carmichael, J. P. Eidson, E. J. Bass, J. H. Blair and S. D. Kidd Jr.

Mayor Parham's salary was raised from $50 to $100 a month.

At the reorganization meeting of the council Tuesday night, the council set all salaries for the year and at the same time announced a further reduction in taxes for 1940.

34 SCHOOL GROUPS MAILED $239,236

State Sends Money for December Salaries.

Twenty-nine county school systems and five city systems were mailed $239,236.88 yesterday to pay school teachers and bus drivers their December salaries, the state school department announced.

Payments yesterday brought the total to $5,234,867.72 for school salaries since the terms opened in September. School authorities estimated approximately $4,000,000 was still available for future school salaries which average about a million and a half dollars monthly.

Fulton county schools received the largest single payment yesterday, $43,680. The largest payment to a city system was $2,400 to Elberton.

Congressional Dilemma

President Roosevelt, in the budget submitted to congress on Thursday, has taken advantage of the financial situation of the federal treasury, in regard to the public debt, and has neatly placed congress on the horns of a dilemma which it is now strictly up to the lawmakers to accept.

Under the law, the national debt cannot go beyond $45,000,000,000. That is the limit imposed upon treasury borrowing.

In his budget the President proposes some drastic cuts in appropriations and asks for new taxes to raise $460,000,000, to cover the increased expenditures for national defense. The balance sheet on this budget shows a smaller national deficit than any year of the present administration, save 1938. It should, therefore, please those factions which have been pleading for an early balancing of the budget and reduction in expenditures.

If the President's figures are accepted, if congress makes exactly the appropriations he asks—and no more—and if, in addition, the requested new taxes to raise $460,000,000 are levied, the end of the fiscal year of 1941 will see the total national debt at $44,938,000,000. This is only $62,000,000 below the borrowing limit of the treasury.

Thus congress, if it refuses to accept the President's budget, will either have to levy still more taxes than those asked, raise the federal debt limit or put the treasury in the position of being called upon for more money than it can legally pay.

And this is an election year! That means there will be even more demands than in an off-election year for special appropriations and increased expenditures. Strong minority groups will bombard congress with appeals for special expenditures in their behalf, lobbyists for all sorts of special interests will be at work and the barrage from those divisions of government activity it is proposed to reduce will be terrific.

It is a problem thrown into the congressional lap and one strictly for congressional solution. It is going to cause much difficulty for vote-seeking congressmen and many a headache on Capitol Hill will be practically traceable to this cause.

The President, in his message, spoke optimistically of the financial situation of the government. He asserted that the public debt is a liability largely offset by public assets and said a true balance sheet would show an adverse balance far smaller than the debt total of $43,222,000,000, as it will stand at the end of the present fiscal year. He pointed, as assets, to $7,000,000,000 in gold held by the treasury, to billions of dollars of durable tangible assets acquired by the government, meaning real estate, utility projects, etc., and to $14,000,000,000 in recoverable loans.

All this may be true and does, in fact, place a happier light on the picture than the listing of the debt alone. But it does not alter the fact that the $45,000,000,000 debt limitation looms as a stymie that congress must conquer, or else acquiesce in the presidentially proposed economies and new taxes.

It is hard to conceive of a more cruel choice, in an election year, than that between rigid economy in appropriations, imposition of new taxes or heavy increase in the public debt. Yet that is the choice thrust upon congress by the budget message. There must have been a smile, tinged with irony, upon the presidential face as that budget was in course of preparation.

In its Black Sea maneuvers, the Soviet fleet routs an imaginary foe. Big Russia has yet to lose a fight to the little man who wasn't there.

A heavy fog fell over the West Front as the Fuehrer stopped by to chat with the troops. A fog lock in a Hitler speech would be eerie.

The grandiose aims of Hitler, says an economist, are plunging the Reich into unprecedented depression. On a high horse, Adolf might not notice this.

The honeymoon is over if they make New Year's resolutions for one another.

A local wise clown has promoted his father to chairman of the board and takes over the operating management of his toy railroad personally.

A slight weakening is remarked on the part of the Red aggressor. In a new proposition to the pursuing Finn, the "—or else" clause is deleted.

Two Conservationists

There was tragic coincidence in the deaths, less than a week apart, of two men who had done more, perhaps, in their life careers to aid the cause of conservation of the nation's resources than any others. Robert Fechner, as head of the Civilian Conservation Corps, had saved and restored to immeasurable value not only great land and forest areas, but also more than a million and a half youths who, had it not been for the new chance provided by the CCC would, in all probability, have been recruited for the army of crime that lurks in the alleys and on the street corners of the great cities.

F. A. Silcox, the other who died, was chief of the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture. He, too, combined the conservation of human and natural resources. The Federal Forest Service holds as its chief objective the saving and wise usage of the nation's manpower and physical resources. As stated by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, the work done by Chief Forester Silcox is "commemorated in a governmental organization of highest efficiency and esprit de corps—and in the grateful remembrance of great service to many of the worthy civic enterprises that American citizens are carrying on today."

Both Mr. Silcox and Mr. Fechner came from the south. Mr. Silcox was born in Columbus, Ga. He was a graduate of the College of Charleston, S. C., and in 1905 graduated from the School of Forestry at Yale University, with the degree of Doctor of Forestry. His career as an outstanding leader in his profession is too well known to need recapitulation.

Mr. Fechner was born in Chattanooga. He attended school at Macon and Griffin and spent a few months at Georgia Tech, though he never graduated from college. He frequently referred to himself as a man "without education" yet the greatest universities of the land were eager to have him as a lecturer. He knew wide experience throughout his life. He served with the Second Georgia Infantry in the Spanish-American war, worked on the construction of the Panama Canal and filled various posts in Central and South America.

He was named head of the CCC by President Roosevelt when that organization was first created. Much of its success is attributed to his wise direction. Of the CCC it has frequently been said that this is one child of the New Deal which no man or faction has been able to criticize and which has contributed tremendously to the natural wealth and the strength of citizenship of the nation.

Two southerners, two conservationists and two great men were lost to the service of the nation when Silcox and Fechner died.

Education That Pays

Those who oppose trade schools on the ground they "cost too much" would do well to consider the experience of Providence, R. I., which made a laboratory test that brought about results glowing enough not only to silence the critics, but to give encouragement to other communities.

Two years ago that city experimented with 25 selected boys. These lads were given 40 hours of vocational work directed toward specific jobs. The cost amounted to $10 for each boy. What happened? Each of the boys immediately found a job, with pay varying from $25 to $38 a week. A checkup a year later showed all were still at work and making progress in their fields.

There is a lesson in this in that it demonstrates if education can add to the general economic level of individuals—and therefore the community—then it behooves all citizens to look upon the so-called cost of education in a new light. It means that schools, and especially trade and vocational institutions, should be classified in public and official minds as investment for the future, not merely as expense.

That such a view is worth while can be seen in a few figures. At a recent meeting of the American Vocational Association it was revealed that 5,000,000 of the 21,000,000 persons in the United States between the ages of 16 and 34 are unemployed. It must be obvious that anything done to alleviate this condition cannot be computed strictly in terms of at-the-moment cash.

These Arctic winters are a boon in one respect. For the Russian general who has a date with the firing squad, dawn doesn't break till 11 a. m.

As we understand the regional elections, lately thrown in Russia, Stalin counts the ballots and the people cast them, in that order.

Editorial of the Day

A RUMOR

(From The Springfield (Ill.) Sun.)

There is a rumor, which seems to have come largely through Italy, that Russia, perhaps anxious to have a war where the conditions are less unfavorable than in Finland, is planning to throw many hundreds of thousands of men into the region north of India, with the intention of taking over that country from Great Britain.

For a good many years of the nineteenth century there was a steady conflict between imperial Russia and Great Britain for spheres of influence in this region. It was the danger spot of the world in the estimation of many British statesmen, and those in other countries who took an interest in such matters expected that sooner or later there would be active war between the two countries in this region.

In addition to any interest which Soviet Russia may have in reviving the policies of imperial Russia in this respect, an interest is felt in India as a probably fertile field for the spread of Communism. Whatever profit Russia might derive from control of India, many Russians would esteem the great value of a conquest the blow which it would be to the leading capitalist nation of Europe.

But, it is rather more likely that this rumor has been developed and spread in the hope of making the British apprehensive and inducing them to make concessions in coming to peace with Germany, than because it is based on fact. Russia has manpower enough to carry on half a dozen large wars at once, but not the supplies and transportation service necessary for carrying them on effectively, and although Stalin may be more or less of a madman, he is probably not crazy enough to start another major conflict until the Finnish affair is in a more favorable state.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The President's message on the state of the Union is one of the curious and fascinating mosaics to which he has the trick of giving impressive pattern. In one paragraph, the boom of domestic reform peeps out between the sentences to frighten potentially rebellious Democrats. In another, congress is put on the spot, as anticipated, in the matter of new taxes. In still another, Secretary of State Cordell Hull's argument for renewal of the trade agreement law is cogently rephrased. But the heart of this omnium gathrum is the President's statement of his theory of American foreign policy, which is franker and fuller than any he has ever offered. Everyone has always known the President did not share the viewpoint of the isolationists. This is the first time he has explained his reasons in detail.

This business of expression is only one thing, that the President believes (quite correctly, so far as one can judge) that the electorate is deserting the isolationists and coming round to his view. This has lately become the opinion of Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Sumner Welles and other leading officials of the State Department. There is every reason for the President to share it.

NECESSARY RISKS As all American foreign policy is now shaped in accordance with the President's theory, his statement of it is extraordinarily significant. It may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. Despite the wishful thinking of the isolationists, this country is not an independent unit. It is a member of the community of nations of the world, and despite its vast resources, its power is not self-sufficient. Therefore, what touches the community of nations touches the self-interest of this country, and entails responsibilities which it is short-sighted to shirk.
2. Applying this doctrine to our present situation, the community of nations is now threatened with "domination by concentrated force alone." Our trade, our communication, our very friendship with other members of the community of nations are thus also threatened. Moreover, what lies before world civilization—necessity includes our own. Thus, it behooves us to see that domination of the world by concentrated force does not come to pass. For the present, this does not mean we should go to war. But we must be aware of our responsibilities, and carry them out toward those who are fighting on what may be called our side.

NO FOOLISH PROMISE This is exactly what the President meant last winter, when he gave the Senate military affairs committee the impression that he regarded the Rhine as an American frontier. This is exactly what Secretary Hull said to congressmen and senators last spring, almost with tears in his eyes, when he was trying to muster a majority for revision of the neutrality act. This is exactly what the President and his advisers have constantly told one another in their private talk during the past four troubled years.

A precis containing the main points to be covered is understood to have been prepared in the State Department. The admirable language of the message was the President's own. But, if it had been just the other way around, it would hardly have mattered. Whoever produced the parts, the whole was an exact expression of a shared viewpoint.

Two details are of special interest. As a specimen of the kind of responsibility imposed by membership in the community of nations, the President remarked that "when the time comes, the United States must use its influence to open up the trade channels of the world." This was included in the plea for the trade agreements, but has a broad significance. A general economic appeasement is regarded at the State Department as an absolute post-war necessity.

Then there is the President's declaration of "hope and expectation that the United States will not become involved in military participation in the war." This is an indirect admission that, while we are avoiding "military participation," we may become involved to the point of sending material aid to the democratic side. By its very limitations, the statement is also an indication of the President's fear of being "another Wilson," of his memory of the foolish promise of the 1916 election.

Practice In Patience.

The other day, having occasion to make a small purchase, I entered a well-known Atlanta retail emporium. Not going to tell you what I bought, I will only say that it was a fair, because I had similar experiences in other stores and, for all I know, most of them may be in similar condition.

Anyway, it was nicely illustrative, perhaps, of the reason why women spend so much time shopping and why the dears are so plugging and why the dears are so plugging late for appointments with hubby after a shopping orgy.

As said, went into this store. Found the proper counter. Could see exactly the article desired in a drawer, behind the glass front.

But there was no clerk. Waited and waited and waited. Crowds passed to and fro along the aisles and I could see, here and there, other more fortunate souls than I, having "helped" themselves to the obliging sales people. But nary a one came near my particular counter. Waited and waited some more.

Nothing was urgently needing my attention at the moment, I thought, and, thought I, perhaps this is good spiritual calisthenics. A practical lesson in patience, perhaps, a quality in which I am, admittedly, lacking.

Finally, desperate, I glimpsed a sardonically charming young man whom I judged to be a floor walker. Diffidently I approached him, where he stood idle, save for a pleasant smile for all and sundry.

Timidly I asked him: "Would you mind going across the street and buying me a package of cigarettes?"

He stared, astonished and perplexed. It was plain to see he thought I was worthy of highly suspicious attention.

"Maybe," continued I, "you'd better get two packages. Perhaps one won't be sufficient."

"Why?" he asked then.

"Well," I explained, "they are to smoke while I wait at that counter over there for a clerk to wait on me. I've already smoked almost all I had with me and I don't want to run short."

It worked. He found a clerk, sent him over and my transaction was concluded in something like 30 seconds.

But some stores do need more clerks, don't they?

18, Count 'Em, Pianos.

They're going to have what is known as a piano ensemble in Decatur. Being a proud Decaturite, it is my privilege to know that it will be good. Then, too, they've had 'em before and, though it is with shame I admit never attending, still confidentially affirm the impression it is more than worth the time and cash involved, to hear.

It will be, unless plans are changed, at the new Decatur auditorium, which sits between the two high schools, masculine and feminine, on McDonough street. The date is Saturday, January 13, in the evening.

As for statistics, which are usually dry things but suggest volume, power and, even tone in this connection, there will be 18 pianos with 128 pianists to perform thereon. In quartets, duos and, probably, in groups of 36 at once—two to each piano.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Newspaper Mistake NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The newspaper business has made a mistake in attempting to treat as a private affair its dealings with the organization of employees, most of them white-collar workers known as the American Newspaper Guild. So little has been published in the daily press about the nature of the Guild and the progress of the dealings between the guild and the companies that, practically speaking, the whole fight, as it must be called, has been kept secret. Meanwhile the labor problems of other industries have received their full due of print. I am sure that the Guild itself has not tried to avoid publicity, so my conclusion is that the publishers have been the bashful ones. Whatever the reason or excuse, the result has been suppression or censorship of this news, and the newspaper industry has suffered as much as the Guild from its reticence.

A full statement of the case from the beginning down to date would have apprised the public of an attempt by the radicals, particularly the Communists, in the Guild leadership and membership, especially in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, to create a condition in which the Guild would be empowered to censor the entire American press. That would be the ultimate effect of a nationwide closed shop in the editorial department. And no more alarming proof of the character of the new coverage and treatment which could be expected under such a closed shop can be found than is provided by the Guild itself in its own weekly organ, the Guild Reporter.

Grievous Reproach This union paper employs all the characteristic party-line tricks of the Communist and Nazi press, and newspapermen and even enthusiastic radicals among them—admit that the Guild-reporter is a grievous reproach to any group professing to stand for fair, objective treatment of news.

The Reporter persistently misrepresents issues and indulges in abuse of individuals who dissent from Guild policies or criticize its Communist officers and politicians. Conservative members find themselves unable to justify or even apologize for the publication of such an organ by a group of journalists who claim the right to criticize the publishers of the daily papers for shading or suppressing news.

Certainly there is no daily newspaper in the country, except the Communist press, which so brazenly abuses the tricks of emphasis, evasion and omission. Hearst at his worst, was a model of correct editorial behavior by comparison with the Guild-reporter, whose editors persistently have played into the hands of their opponents, the publishers, by demonstrating that the American press would lose all and gain nothing but shackles if it were placed under Guild editorial direction through adoption of the closed shop.

Purpose Subordinated The original purpose of the Guild was to improve the economic condition of editorial employees, but that purpose has been subordinated to the political aims of the Communists and the New Dealers almost from the beginning.

In fact, the Guild has aggressively attacked the economic interests of the members by attempting to destroy newspapers which provided employment. As to whether it has been successful in destroying jobs there may be some argument. But in the case of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, the Guild Reporter, week by week, has poured, with malicious glee, the amount of economic damage that was inflicted on the paper.

Eventually the Herald-Examiner folded up, and when that happened the Guild Reporter tossed off a suggestion that the paper was bound to die soon, anyway. The non-Guild journalists and the mechanical men of the AFL union who opposed the strike were very sore at the Guild for destroying all those jobs, and many Guild members saw no profit for newspapermen and women in the abolition of employment. And certainly, on the score of journalistic ethics, the Guild Reporter was in no position to cast aspersions on the Herald-Examiner or any other daily paper.

Created Not the worst Bitterness Guild, but one of its bad ones, nevertheless, has been the creation of a spirit of bitterness between newspaper workers themselves. Those who refused to join or joined only under economic pressure and still resisted Guild policies were deemed to have no rights that must be respected, and first-class writers and reporters have been exposed to malicious abuse by unionists who are not newspapermen or women at all.

The party line of the Communists is given away in the preferred treatment which the Guild gives the Communist Daily Worker. The Muscovite paper in not even organized or required to live up to any of the conditions which must be met by other publishers, and the only excuse is that the party which attacked Finland is fighting the battle of the workers.

Teacher Can't Read.

For more than 40 years 83-year-old Moses Jones has been teaching school children the Welsh alphabet in a Merthyr Sunday school at Cardiff, Wales. He has received presents for his work, yet he can neither read nor write.

Kidnap Hitching Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jeanes "little sailor boy" at Devon, Pa., constantly is being kidnapped but they just place an advertisement in the lost and found columns. The "boy," a 200-pound cast-iron hitching post, usually is carried away by neighborhood youths as a prank.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

A MATTER OF TIN CANS "Well," he said, "what industry uses the most tin cans?" "I said maybe the industry which canned peas. There always seem to be peas. As far as I know, I have attended only one luncheon in a decade which did not have green peas, slightly cold, on the plate. I was sure it was peas."

"No," he said, "guess again."

So, this time I guessed tomatoes. Every time I go into a grocery store, which I like to do because they are attractive, I see great stacks of canned tomatoes.

"No," he said, grinning.

I was weary and so, I said, flatly, it was bound to be beer. Canned beer.

"No," he said, "dog food. The dog food industry uses more cans than any other industry. Condensed milk used to be first."

I sat there and thought about it. We were having dinner and the music was going and some sleek-haired young man was mooring into a microphone.

"Well, I'll be doggone," said the inevitable wag. It was a surprise. I knew that during the 1932 depression, which the Republican party helped spawn through "Careful Cal" Coolidge and Herbert Hoover, that a great many of the desperately poor ate the canned dog food because it was cheap, some of it five cents a can. It was full of vitamins and, if not appetizing, was food.

Nevertheless, it was surprising to learn the canned dog food business was the greatest user of tin cans.

A CROSS SECTION Bird dogs, field trial dogs, are the property of no special section. Probably Dr. B. S. Lester, of Birmingham, has the most consistent winners. Both are pointers, an all-cause dog, Lester's Enjoy Wahoo, and a "Derby" Lester's Finance.

Out in Hutchinson, Kansas, are two more great pointers. Ray Hoagland, at Cartersville, Georgia, has two nationally-known dogs, Topsy's Tip-Top and Rumson Farm Lock, a pointer and setter.

Austin, Texas; Greenwich, Connecticut; Kokomo, Indiana; Mt. Holly, New Jersey—are other cities which are starred on the bird dog map of this country.

They all are part of a great system of "trials" which begin on the Canadian prairies and swing down to the real bird dog country in Tennessee, Georgia, Missouri, Mississippi.

Georgia is coming to be the real bird dog capital of the nation. The bird dog people could attract thousands instead of hundreds to their trials if they could run the trials before grandstands. But he who would see a bird dog trial must ride a horse for many an hour. The galleries are, in comparison, small.

It is one of the fascinating sports and one which has come to be peculiarly American. It attracts and holds men with bonds stronger than steel.

I am sorry all this grew out of a dinner-table talk and this doesn't seem to be the proper place to stop, but 'twill do.

THE BIRD DOG SEASON The bird dogs are having their inning now the bowl games are done and baseball is played in hotel rooms.

The "meat" dogs don't make the picture sections with any frequency. But the aristocrats of the bird dog world, the field trial dogs, do.

There are 175,000 breeders of bird dogs in America—registered breeders. There are 2,000,000 bird dogs in the United States. They make up, all by themselves, a sizeable industry.

It is estimated that in 1937, the last year for which figures are available, that a mere $12,000,000 was spent on the bird dog industry and hunting.

This did not include the hundreds and hundreds of owners of one or two shooting dogs on whom it was impossible to check.

SO WE SAT THERE So, we sat there. The hand balled. A trumpeter did a "hot lips" number. Out on the dance floor the couples danced, waddled and walked, all fondly believing they danced.

I could smell the air of a cold, crisp morning in the field. I could hear the creak of saddles and the snort of horses. There isn't anything in the world as pretty as a brace of bird dogs running up a course toward the horizon atop a slight hill. There just isn't.

The trumpeter quit and I sat there, thinking back a dozen trials, hearing a handler shout "Point! Point!" and feeling again the surge of the horses in the gallery and hearing the heavy thud of hoofs across a field.

The chair was harder than a saddle. It was a curious place to talk bird dogs.

Another Letter From A Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My dear Louise:

Since you are a football fan (which, by the way, is short for fanatic) I suppose you read the Grantland Rice article in Collier's, announcing the board's selection of All-American players.

Explaining why the strongest squads were sometimes upset by weaker foes, Mr. Rice said no squad could meet tough opposition every Saturday and maintain the physical and mental fitness necessary to win. The mental attitude of the players can be as variable as the winds, and may change enough within a week to make a difference of two or three touchdowns in a squad's strength.

Every athlete learns by sad experience that physical perfection isn't enough to make him a winner if his mental state isn't right. The boxer complains to his manager between rounds: "I can't get going." He knows he isn't doing his best, but try as he will he can do no better, for he entered the ring burdened and handicapped by a state of mind as dreary as a fog.

"He rejoices as a strong man to run a race." Remember that line? That tells the story. The champion's mind must click with lightning speed and precision, but that alone is not enough. He must have supreme confidence; he must rejoice in combat; he must be keyed up by a spirit of exaltation—a glorious feeling that he can lick the world. When he has that, he is a winner.

I can't tell you why the state of mind has such authority over the body, unless the glands are responsible, but your own experience will show that it is. Force yourself to be cheerful when you feel scarcely able to crawl, and soon your body perks up like a tired old horse at sight of the feed box.

Once roomed with a big simple fellow who never had been sick and felt ashamed of any sign of weakness. One morning, after being caught out in a storm, he awoke groaning and scarcely able to move. For a moment he surrendered and lay helpless. Then he roared at himself in wrathful reproach: "What do you mean, sir! Get out of here!" And with that his feet hit the floor, and soon Richard was himself again.

It works both ways. Enforced physical activity starts your machinery humming right, and then your mind cheers up; forcing yourself to be cheerful tunes up your physical equipment.

You are mistress in your own house and can make your mental state sour or sweet, mean or generous, craven or valorous, just as you please. And the mental state you choose to make will in turn make you.

Love,

Dad.

EUROPEANS FACE ENEMY AT FRONT, TAX MAN AT HOME

Public in Some Warring Nations Pay 10 Times Rate in U. S.; Bachelor Nicked in All Lands.

By WES GALLAGHER.
NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(P)—Even as congress prepares to finance the largest defense appropriations in 20 years, the peoples of Europe's five warring nations are digging deep to shell out income levies in many cases ten times those in the United States.

Europe's war demands on personal income promise to throw its taxpayers for the largest losses since the old Roman hordes swept over the continent and made it pay accordingly.

An international tax table indicates the startling differences in old and new world levies.

(This table includes only the federal income tax in the United States and does not take into consideration special exemptions. It also does not indicate the wage scales in various countries nor does the wide differences in purchasing powers of various monies.)

Bachelors Pay Most.
The heaviest tax guns have been aimed at the "poor" bachelor in 1940, giving a new financial meaning to the old phrase, "married bliss."

For example, a bachelor with the equivalent of a $2,000 yearly income in Germany must pay an income tax of $499, in England $350, France $328, Finland $142, Soviet Russia $60 and in the United States $40.

A married man with two children in the same $2,000 class in Germany pays $159, England $70, France $300, Finland $113, the Soviet Union $60 and in the United States doesn't pay anything.

The difference is more strikingly indicated in the higher salaried classes of $4,000 and $20,000 a year or their equivalents.

A married couple with no children in the $4,000 class pays in Germany $746, England $871, France $1,021, Finland $466, Russia $120 and the United States $60. A bachelor with a $20,000 income in Germany pays $12,940 of it to the government, in France $10,000 and in the United States $450.

Wives Called Assets.
Some nations, particularly Germany, England and the United States, have generous exemptions for married couples even though they have no children. Finland, however, makes a married couple without children pay exactly the same tax as a bachelor.

A Finnish official who was asked about this coolly replied: "In Finland, wives are considered assets, not liabilities."

The Soviets also make no exemptions unless a couple have four or more children.

Following is an international income tax table computed from official information.

Russia's figures do not include any changes made since the outbreak of her war with Finland.

on the desert near Baker, Cal., and they completed the journey in a rented machine, arriving about noon.

Roosevelt Believed Favoring Study of Budgetary Needs

Harrison Proposal for Independent Survey Wins Widespread Support.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(P)—The idea of an independent congressional study of the nation's budgetary needs won widespread support today, and there were indications that the administration itself was thinking favorably of the proposal.

The Republicans of the senate formally endorsed it, with the added suggestion that national defense needs be studied by a similar committee, and Chairman Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, of the house ways and means committee, after visiting President Roosevelt, gave it his tentative blessing.

Doughton's "Conversion."
Doughton was known to have been unfavorably impressed with the suggestion when it was first broached yesterday by Chairman Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, of the senate finance committee. His "conversion," as some called it, came as a distinct surprise to those who had been watching the situation.

The Harrison plan called for a 60-day delay in action on taxes and appropriations. Meanwhile, a joint committee of 24, drawn equally from the two senate and two house committees which handle revenue and appropriations, would make its own investigation of budgetary requirements.

Because Harrison has been a leading opponent of administration spending policies for the last two years and longer, and because he made his proposal a short time after the President's budget message, covering the same ground, had been received, the move was widely interpreted as sharply anti-administration.

Move Toward Unity?
But if, as some were led to believe by Doughton's attitude today, the administration is now preparing to embrace the proposal, two explanations are possible: That President Roosevelt is anxious to remove the anti-administration tinge from the proposed investigation by endorsing it; or that in his desire for a "national unity session," with controversies held to a minimum, he will interpose no obstacles.

At any rate, it was recalled that Secretary Morgenthau has in the past urged that such a study be made, possibly as a continuing, year-to-year process. It was Harrison, canny master of congressional strategy, who reminded the capitol of that.

80,000-TON U. S. BATTLESHIP URGED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(UP)—High naval officials have suggested to congress the feasibility of converting the two 45,000-ton battleships now under construction into huge super-dreadnaughts, it was learned today.

Navy officers, testifying before a house appropriations subcommittee, reportedly favored the plan and pointed out that such changes in the vessels—the Iowa and the New Jersey—would permit them to be completed and launched before any other nation could match them.

Several congressmen, including Representative Melvin J. Maas, Republican, Minnesota, are agitating for ships as large as 80,000 tons. The two 45,000 tonners, costing $90,000,000 each, were expected to be the largest in the world, but Japan is said to be building some of equal, if not greater size.

Meanwhile Representative John D. Dingell, Democrat, Michigan, said that house ways and means committee Democrats had authorized him to discuss with the Treasury and State departments a bill to lend Finland $60,000,000. Dingell also said he intended to offer a bill to sell Finland 10,000 new automatic rifles "at $1 apiece for experimental purposes." Aid to Finland "is an obligation of civilization," he declared.

"FLU" CUTS CLASSES.
SPARTA, Ga., Jan. 5.—Superintendent B. M. Harrison reports more absences in the local schools, since the opening of the spring term Monday, than in years, due to an "epidemic" of influenza and colds. At least 50 per cent of the pupils of each grade are out, and it will be at least a week or two before the attendance will be back to normal, according to the superintendent.

RULE MAY CURTAIL FULTON WPA WORK

chairman of the legislative committee of the board of managers, was ordered to draw up the resolution in its final form.

In presenting his plea, Mr. Almand pointed out that there are 6,000 persons now on WPA work, with from 5,000 to 6,000 more eligibles on the waiting list. Whether following the new requirements would cut the county program by one-half or one-fourth or three-fourths, he said, would be impossible to say until it could be learned how much money credit the county would get for materials and labor furnished. It also is still impossible to say to what extent the county can furnish cash for WPA participation, he explained.

$600 Spent Monthly.
The county now is spending $600 a month rental for WPA offices in the Western Union building, he pointed out, and is giving, free of charge, the old telephone building, now county property, to the WPA for headquarters.

The board of managers adopted another resolution calling upon the state to take misdemeanor convicts from the counties without requiring an $8 clothing deposit, and without requiring the county to pay for the transportation of the prisoner back to the county in which he was convicted, after serving of sentences.

"The present rule of the penal board is causing the breakdown of misdemeanor courts in the small counties," A. J. Keith, of Meriwether county, declared. "Knowing that the county would have to bear this cost of turning the prisoner over to the state, judges now are imposing light fines and prison sentences, and then are suspending the sentences," he said. "The whole spirit of law and justice is being destroyed."

Those Present.
The board also voted to send Keith to Chicago February 29-March 2 to the meeting of the American Road Builders' Association.

Mr. Keith was instructed to find out to what extent other states participate in WPA road-building projects, with a view toward asking the state government of Georgia to take over a share of the burden of the road work. The counties cannot bear the one-fourth of expense required.

Present at the meeting, besides Mr. Keith, were F. E. Gabriels, Habersham county, second vice president; Tate Wright, Clarke county, executive secretary-treasurer; Miss Betty Peeler, Atlanta, assistant secretary, and the following members of the board of managers:

GOOD MORNING -- By Louie D. Newton

The Great Confession.
Sunday's lesson, Matthew 16: 13-28, is the Christian's confession of faith. It is the occasion of Jesus calling His disciples apart from the surging crowds of the quiet of Caesarea Philippi, a beautiful city located near the headwaters of the Jordan, overshadowed by the magnificent Hermon range of hills. It was the most northerly point reached by Jesus. The incident took place in the autumn of A. D. 29.

Four great truths are declared in this confession—a confession which Jesus declared could not have been made by Peter alone or any other mere man, but a revelation of the Father to all believers alike. Note these four great truths: First, Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God; second, the Son of God is the founder of the church; third, the founder of the church is the atoning Saviour; fourth, the atoning Saviour is Lord today and forever. He is the divine Christ, the building Christ, the suffering Christ, the sovereign Christ.

The disciples had been with Jesus nearly three years. They regarded Him as their great teacher, but now the time had come when they must regard Him as more than a teacher. Jesus had referred to Himself as the son of man on 88 occasions, by which phrase He had set forth His complete humanity and His authority to take upon Himself the form of man while remaining at the same time very God of very God. He was also regarded as a great prophet, but the time had come when He must be regarded as more than prophet.

"Whom do men say that I the son of man am?" asked Jesus. "Some say that Thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremiah, or one of the prophets," they answered Him. "But whom say ye that I am?" He asked. And

Simon Peter answered and said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

Reminding Peter that this, his answer, was a revelation of God to all men, declaring that His church, "an assembly of called-out ones," will be built by Himself—that He is its Foundation, its Heart, its Head. The church belongs to Christ, and not even the gates of Hades can bolt and fasten Jesus and His redeemed ones within its dark domain. The keys are in His hands. See Revelation 1:18 and 3:7. With reference to binding and loosing, see Matthew 18:18 and John 20:23.

And after rebuking Peter for his quick relapse into human rationalizing, Jesus declared, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." He is the Saviour and Lord, our great High Priest by Whom and through Whom any and all may find access to the Father. This is the great confession.

Y. W. C. A. hostels in England are overflowing with women on national and military service.

SIX SAVED BY YOUTH FROM BURNING HOUSE

WARREN, Ont., Jan. 5.—(P)—Dashing through flames, 11-year-old Leo Bibeau guided his mother and two sisters safely out of their burning home early today, dropped two younger children from the second story into waiting arms below, and then jumped safely into the snow with the baby in his arms.

Joseph Bibeau, father of the family, had left to work in the fields when the house caught fire, apparently from an overheated furnace.

One-Sixth of U. S. Malaria Deaths Occurred in Georgia During Decade, Fact Finders Are Told in Health Report

Economic Progress Rests on Disease Control, Abercrombie Survey Shows.

One-sixth of all deaths from malaria in the United States in the past 10 years have occurred in Georgia and this state's existing health problem must be solved if its economic status is to be improved, a report to the Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement, composed of 17 state-wide organizations, emphasized last night.

The report, prepared under the direction of Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, state director of public health, assisted by Dr. Guy G. Lunsford and Dr. Edward R. Watson, was discussed at the monthly meeting of the movement at the Ansley hotel, with the authors leading in the analysis.

Pointing out that "the vitality of a state can be measured by the health of its people," the report cited six findings:

"1. One-sixth of all deaths from malaria in the United States during the past 10 years have occurred in Georgia. For years Georgia has ranked from first to third place in malaria deaths.

"2. One in every 10 persons in our insane asylums is there because of syphilis of the brain. It costs Georgia taxpayers approximately $150,000 annually to support them.

"3. Only 170 out of the 593 incorporated towns in Georgia have public sewer systems. And in of the homes are connected with available sewers. Out of 402,603 rural homes in Georgia (1930 census), it is estimated that less than 100,000 have any means of sanitary sewage disposal.

"4. During 1938-39 dental inspection of 181,343 school children in 98 counties of the state revealed that 72 per cent needed dental treatment.

"5. Only one town in Georgia has a milk supply which is on the accredited list of the United States Public Health Service.

"6. It is estimated that communicable diseases accounted for 1,296,551 days of disability among Georgia people during 1938. This is equivalent to 3,552 years. The cost of illness in the state is estimated to exceed $135,802,289 annually.

Georgia's Low Income.

"Georgia needs more money to spend for public health and medical care. However, the very situation that has caused this need makes it difficult to provide the funds. Thus we come again to the low per capita income of Georgians, and to the vicious cycle of which it is a part. Low income necessitates low standards of living. Many of our people are handicapped at the outset by malnutrition. They are unable to pay for themselves good housing or sanitary surroundings, are unable to afford adequate medical attention or to promote preventive health measures, are unable as well to have access to educational facilities so that they may be able to better health. In turn this situation restricts the ability of the people to increase their income.

"Further, those families least able to provide necessary advantages for their children are rearing a relatively high proportion of the oncoming generation—children who, inescapably, are poorly developed, malnourished and insufficiently educated. Even a casual view of our health situation indicates that this vicious cycle must be interrupted, and the importance of the task should inspire intelligent planning.

See New Problems.

"Lack of adequate income is no new condition in Georgia, and constantly has been a factor in restricting investment in health. Yet had greater effort been made in the past to combat health problems as they made their appearance, we would not be faced with health conditions as they exist today in Georgia. We must anticipate that new problems will appear. Delay in attacking those that confront us will result in further accumulation, and a more costly health program in the future than that which is now necessary.

"The amount of money paid to physicians, nurses, midwives, chiropractors, osteopaths and hospitals is estimated to be $29,000,000 annually. The annual loss in wages amounts to $14,746,280, if we allow an average of $1 a day for earnings.

"If we accept as a conservative estimate that 20 per cent of those gainfully employed in Georgia have physical defects, then 368,349 people are restricted in doing efficient work. Estimating that they are only 75 per cent efficient, the economic loss would amount to $33,500,000, provided the average value of their services were $1 a day.

"The average per capita expenditure for medicine, including physicians' prescriptions, home remedies and patent medicines, is estimated to be $5.50 per year. Using the estimated 1938 population, we find that Georgians spend annually approximately $17,048,619 for medicines.

Preventable Diseases.

"The cost of premature death is also difficult to evaluate. If the various departments, totaling $192,661.59 for the year came before the group. No action was taken on these last night.

Entering the meeting just $40,000 short of the amount available for the year under budget commission estimates of 1940 revenue, the committee authorized, tentatively at least, the following extra sums:

Purchase of an asphalt plant, $10,000; increasing street repairs from $40,000 for the year to $75,000; purchase of 12 motorcycles for the police department, $5,000; new playgrounds for the first ward, northwest Atlanta and Capitol View sections, $55,000. The parks allocation was accompanied by a request that the Fulton county commission provide half the cost.

Provided in addition four new branch library buildings, containing 10,000 books each, the way to better health. In turn this situation restricts the ability of the people to increase their income.

HARRY THAW FACES SUIT FOR $500,000

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A $500,000 suit against wealthy Harry K. Thaw was filed in circuit court here today by Simon F. Williams, an attorney.

Only the praecipe for summons was filed and it did not give the basis for the suit.

Thaw was listed as a resident of Virginia, but Williams gave Thaw's present address as 1937 Meridian avenue, Miami.

We assume that the loss to Georgia for each preventable death averages $2,500 and that 50 per cent of the deaths can be prevented or postponed, the 33,617 deaths in Georgia during 1938 were equivalent to a loss of $42,021,250.

"A review of some of the preventable diseases that occurred during 1938 shows the following:

Disease	No. Cases	No. Deaths	Days Disabled
Dysentery	1,017	47	8,746
Typhoid fever	1,017	47	21,357
Malaria	3,216	146	314,400
Scarlet fever	282	13	16,422
Diphtheria	1,232	106	25,872
Dysentery	679	192	12,580
Gonorrhea	4,696	—	46,860
Syphilis	18,090	478	608,000
Pneumonia	5,165	2,831	154,950
Measles	10,514	157	24,000
Whooping cough	2,329	225	385,200
Total	1,296,551	—	—

This total amounts to 3,552 years of disability accumulated in one year in Georgia.

"It must be recognized that for this state to have an adequate health program, such a program must be financed to a large extent out of federal funds. This great need of national assistance is due largely to the fact that the wealth of the south has long been drained away by our national economic policies. Since the problem of health is national in scope, federal health appropriations should be allocated on the basis of need rather than on the basis of population. Such funds made available to states should be left under state control.

"Local governments cannot lay the whole burden on the federal government. Our cities, counties and state must shoulder an equitable part of the cost."

LEAP YEAR JOKE TO COLLEGE GIRLS

'There Are More Subtle Ways,' Says Sophomore at Agnes Scott.

For approximately seven centuries there has been a lot of talk about leap year and what happens to the traditional proposal of marriage during those periods when February takes unto itself an extra day.

The answer, according to girls at Agnes Scott College, is that nothing happens.

'Never Heard of It.'

Out of 500 girls, none of whom need know anything about alleged leap year practices, not one has ever heard of any reversal of form in marriage proposals simply because the number four mysteriously becomes a divisor with an even quotient.

Furthermore, they have never heard of anybody who ever knew one of the weaker sex who pointed victoriously to a leap year calendar and asked of a bashful male, "Will you marry me?" It just isn't done; that is, in so many words.

Miss Sarah Copeland, of Dalton, Miss Mary James Seagle, of Lincolnton, N. C., and Miss Susan Cochran, of Charlotte, N. C., all sophomores at Agnes Scott, sat in a parlor yesterday, tossed their pretty heads and agreed that leap year was so much talk, not much action.

"There are more subtle ways of proposing marriage than a blunt leap year question," says Miss Copeland, "and these ways are a good anytime. If he won't propose after three years, the fourth one won't make any difference."

Opinion Is Unanimous.

All they would talk about was the coming dances. How about this proposal of marriage business? Do you think that's a good idea?

In so many words, "No!" All the world, it seems, loves a lover except on leap year, which has 29.

FOOD STAMPS GIVEN TO MEMPHIS NEEDY

14,000 Families, or 40,000 Persons, To Be Aided Within Month.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The government launched its program here today to give to relief clients colored stamps redeemable for food.

Officials estimated 800 families received stamps today and that within a month more than 14,000 families representing about 40,000 persons will have taken part in the plan.

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation office announced it had received $18,500 worth of blue stamps, good only for obtaining surplus foods, and had purchased $17,000 in orange stamps, which may be exchanged for other household commodities.

Only direct relief clients of the Memphis and Shelby County Welfare Association and those awaiting WPA assignment were given stamps today. Approximately 1,600 WPA workers are expected to receive stamps tomorrow. Beginning Monday, other eligible applicants will be served.

DR. NEWTON SPEAKS.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 5.—(AP)—In the first formal chapter of the year at Mercer University today, Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of Druid Hills Baptist church, Atlanta, and secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, traced the history of the Atlanta before a large audience of students and visitors.

Olivier stood up in his seat and climbed over the rows until he had reached next to Vivien. They chatted throughout the intermission.

Immediately following the premiere, Olivier found a means by which he and Miss Leigh could miss the parties. They caught the night plane for Newark.

Wait Divorces.

Olivier had done some talking during the few hours ride in the early morning in that plane.

When they stepped from the plane at Newark, they announced their engagement and said the marriage would take place as soon as they both were granted their divorces.

When word was received in Hollywood, yesterday that Barker Holman was divorcing his wife, Miss Leigh was vacationing at the Lake Arrowhead mountain resort. Friends said she wouldn't be surprised. Nobody thought she would be.

Miss Leigh adopted her stage name by using her own first name, Vivien, and her husband's second name, Leigh. The result was Vivien Leigh, by which she is known to all who haven't seen "Gone With the Wind." To those who have, she is "Scarlett O'Hara" or "Scarlett Butler" or just plain "Scarlett."

Has One Child.

She has one child and has been married since 1930. Many Hollywood writers credit Olivier with obtaining the coveted role of "Scarlett" for Vivien Leigh. She came over here to see him and while here obtained the role.

He expressed himself as being very proud of her when he was in Atlanta. He told us then that: "I'm going to marry that girl if I can."

And one big obstacle is in the process of being removed.

During the premiere intermission, Olivier proved a first-rate lover. Separated from his Vivien by five rows of seats and blocked from getting to her via the aisles by the local policemen who were holding back autograph-seekers,

Modern Girls Don't Depend on a Calendar, It Seems

Miss Sarah Copeland, of Dalton, a sophomore at Agnes Scott College, checks a Leap Year calendar and says that just because February has 29 days doesn't mean there will be any sudden reversal of form in marriage proposals. She expresses the general opinion of 500 girls in the Decatur school who think there are more subtle ways of proposing marriage than waiting for a number divisible by four. In other words, boys—the indirect approach.

GIRL AT THE FRONT

The Stranger In The Hotel Room Tells Claire Cameron Is Alive But In Danger

By BOB EDEN.

SYNOPSIS. Happy to be leaving behind the constant fear of Nazi bombers, Claire Cameron, private secretary to William Amherst Cameron, awaits him on the deck of the French liner St. Croix until the ship can be lowered. Cameron, diplomatic liaison agent who is responsible only to the President, has been delayed by a last-minute conference in Paris and Claire knows she can't return home without him—she has a letter to her father and a duplicate of her passport. She goes to the American embassy and Welles Sanford, the American ambassador, who is in the city on a last-minute conference in Paris, and Claire knows she can't return home without him—she has a letter to her father and a duplicate of her passport. She goes to the American embassy and Welles Sanford, the American ambassador, who is in the city on a last-minute conference in Paris, and Claire knows she can't return home without him—she has a letter to her father and a duplicate of her passport.

INSTALLMENT X.

"Was—was there anything else?" Sanford reached in his pocket, produced a heavy envelope and took a ring and watch from it. "These, too, were on the body. The ring on a finger—the watch in his pocket. Do you recognize them?" Claire gingerly took the ring in her hand and turned it over and over. It was a cameo in an old-fashioned setting. She had seen it many times on Bill Cameron's finger. He had seen her looking at it one day, and slipped it from his hand for her to examine more closely. "It was my father's," he said. "I've worn it ever since his death." "Yes, it's his ring," Claire's lips scarcely moved as she confirmed the identification. "And the watch?" Sanford held it out to her and replaced the ring in the envelope. The watch was a very thin model, the case plain with a small monogram engraved on the back. The girl traced out the initials. "W. A. C." William Amherst Cameron. She handed the watch back, and nodded her head, dully. "Yes, this belonged to Bill, too," she said. How many times she had seen it on the desk of his office in Washington. Cameron had a habit of taking it from his pocket and putting it on the blotter before him when he called her in for dictation. "I have an early appointment," he told her once, grinning as he saw her eyes on the watch. But she knew it was only a habit. He always did it when he dictated whether he had an appointment or not. "Borset called me more than an hour ago and had me go down to the morgue," Sanford went on. "He had instructed all branches of the police to notify him immediately if any bodies were found." "He was positive himself after examining the papers and other things found on the body, and phoned me to come down. I was convinced myself when I went over the papers." "Then you made the identification?" Claire's eyes ached, her voice echoed dully in her own ears. She didn't know why she was asking these questions which seemed so obvious. "Yes. The embassy will attend to everything. He will be buried here, temporarily. After the burial is over, we'll see that he's taken home if that is what his family wishes." "You're absolutely positive?" "Yes. The only thing we need to make it complete is fingerprints. Borset has taken those already. I've cabled Washington to send a copy of Cameron's prints from the files there. It is just a matter of form, but of course we can't pass up any possible chance to make the identification absolute." Claire nodded. "I suppose you'll want to be going back as soon as possible, now," Sanford suggested, kindly. "I think I can get you on a neutral boat which is sailing from Marseilles day after tomorrow for Mexico. From there, you can get a boat to New York. Will that be all right, Claire?" "Yes—that will be all right." "Is there anything else I can do for you?" "When—when will the services be?"

"Tomorrow morning—that is this morning—at 10 o'clock from the undertaker's chapel. Ordinarily, services would be at the American church, but under the circumstances, I think this will be best. The rector will be asked to officiate. I'll attend to that later this morning."

"I'll want to be there," Claire said. Sanford gave her the address and then left, explaining he had many things to do before the hour of the services.

Claire sat in a deep leather chair in the lobby after he had gone, her brain numbed by the shock of the news she had just heard. Bill Cameron was dead. Nothing else mattered, now.

She tried to think of things they had done together. She recalled little jokes they had had between themselves. Every moment of intimacy she could remember, and there were not many of them, came crowding into her mind.

Suddenly, she felt tears welling from her eyes, and when she looked toward the desk, everything seemed blurred. She controlled herself and dried her eyes with her handkerchief. Again she glanced toward the desk, and then started up from her chair. The clock over the reception desk pointed at five minutes to two.

She walked with dragging steps to the elevator, opened the door and as it slid shut, pressed the button for the fourth floor. There she alighted and walked down the corridor to the stairs, and climbed to the fifth floor. A dim light made it barely possible to read the numbers on the doors.

At Room 567, she paused and looked around. There was no one else in the corridor. She turned the knob and walked in. The room was dark.

If Claire hadn't been so stunned by the news Sanford had brought her—that Bill Cameron was dead—she undoubtedly would have screamed when she entered the dark room and felt a hand reach out and touch hers. As it was, a violent shudder went through her body, a shudder of fright.

There was a slight click behind her and she knew the door had been closed, and then a low voice spoke, reassuringly. "Don't be alarmed, Miss Dutton. There is no one here who will harm you."

"Why it is necessary to be in absolute darkness," she demanded. "If it is for your own protection, I don't want you to see my face—to be able to recognize me if you should see me again."

"But I do know who you are," she blurted out. "You're . . ."

"Stop!" the man's voice commanded, sharply. "You may think you know who I am, but you are not sure. If anyone should ever question you about 'Z. Y.' try to make you reveal my identity, you can truthfully say you don't know who I am. You never have seen my face."

"But I recognize your voice," she insisted.

"No you didn't," the man went on. "You've never heard my voice before. You've never seen me. You have no idea who I really am. You must believe what I am saying. It is for your own protection, as well as mine. Now, do you understand?"

"Yes," if Noel Yorke wanted to keep up this pretense, even when they were alone, there was nothing she could do about it. "But why did you have me come here?" "You want to find Bill Cameron, don't you?"

"I did. That's why I came back to Paris. That's why I've been trying my best to get some hint about him ever since I returned. But now—now it's too late."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that he is dead. Welles Sanford has just told me that a body found in the Seine, with Mr.

Cameron's papers and ring and watch and his clothes, undoubtedly was his. He has identified the body and has arranged for burial.

"That is wrong, Miss Dutton. Absolutely wrong. I don't know anything about this body that was found, but I know it isn't Cameron's. He is very much alive, but whether he lives much longer may depend upon you."

"Bill is alive?" A shock like an electric current shot through the girl's body. Her mind, which had been dull, slow to grasp the meaning of even the most simple things since Sanford told her that Cameron was dead, suddenly was sharp, alert again. Hope surged up inside her again, and then faded. "Please—please, Mr. Y—Z. Y., don't tell me that if it's not true. I can't stand another shock such as I've just had."

"I'm telling you the truth. I can tell you more—if you'll listen. But Cameron, until today, was still in France. He was smuggled across the frontier just after dusk, and by now undoubtedly is in Belgium. He is a prisoner, but he is alive and well. We know that much."

"But why, if you knew where he was, didn't you do something?" Claire demanded. "Why wasn't he rescued?"

"We didn't locate him and his captors—espionage agents—until too late. They had already slipped across the border with him when we picked up the trail."

"But why was he captured? What can any one hope to gain by that? Our country is neutral. He can't be held as a prisoner of war."

"They know that Cameron can tell them about the big offensive that is being planned for late this week. They know that he knows the plans decided upon at the last war conference between the Allied leaders. That's why he was kidnapped. At the same time, the incendiary powder was planted with your baggage as a sort of afterthought. It would strike a severe blow to France to lose the St. Croix, and it was hoped its destruction might cause ill feeling in the United States because the lives of American citizens on board were jeopardized or lost."

Claire felt tears coursing down her cheeks, tears of happiness. Bill was alive. He was alive! And she had thought him dead! True, he was in danger, terrible danger, but he was alive. "Z. Y." had convinced her of that.

"What—what can I do to help?" she asked, eagerly. "I'll do anything—anything to help Bill—Mr. Cameron."

"I hoped you might volunteer," the voice said in the darkness. "We are desperately short of the right sort of people—people equipped with intelligence and education and with the courage to serve. Are you sure you have the nerve to go through with a very desperate venture—one that may cost you your life should you fail?"

"If it will help Mr. Cameron—yes, I'll dare anything."

"Remember, it will require quick-wittedness as much as courage. Do you think you can qualify?"

"Yes," Claire said, simply, and she was certain in her own mind at that moment that there was no danger she wouldn't face, no terror she wouldn't experience to help the man she now knew she loved more than life itself.

POWERFUL GUNS OF MAGINOT LINE ROUT NAZI TROOPS

Long-Range Shelling Said To Have Sent Germans Scurrying Into Countryside From Own Towns.

(Picture on Page 6.)
By RALPH E. HEINZEN.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—(Saturday)—A number of German villages seven to ten miles behind the western front were "demolished" yesterday when long-range guns of the Maginot line let loose with all-day bombardment against Nazi troop concentrations, military reports said.

The shelling, described as the heaviest since the first days of the war, was said to have sent German troops scattering for shelter in the open countryside.

The bombardment began in the morning along a 125-mile stretch of the western front when the fortress guns of the Maginot line went into action and were joined later by mobile 105-millimeter guns.

Curtain of Fire.
The heaviest shelling was in the "triple corner" in and just east of the Moselle valley near the Luxembourg frontier, north of the Maginot forts at Sierck.

As the heavy guns roared, French infantry patrols stormed German outposts and were said to have wiped out six of them, killing and wounding an unrevealed number of Germans and returning with prisoners.

French 75's sent a rolling barrage ahead of the patrols and held the German outposts under a curtain of fire, it was said.

As soon as the French patrols struck out, German patrols tried to swarm against reinforced French outposts north of Reims and Bitche in the Moselle valley but were driven off by intense fire, military dispatches said.

In the Vosges mountain region, westward toward the Rhine, French Alpine ski and foot troops carried out "useful" but cautious patrols and claimed to have obtained important information regarding the enemy's movements.

2,500 Troops Battle.
The bombardment sent shells over the section of the western front of no-man's-land where intense patrol activity on the previous day brought an estimated 2,500 soldiers to grips in close fighting.

While the larger guns hammered the German villages and towns, more than 500 mobile electric-firing French 75's sent salvo after salvo into advance positions of the German lines to back up French patrols which swarmed into no-man's-land.

The French expected the German guns to take up the challenge of the bombardment but there was only light counter-fire late in the day and no major combat occurred.

The bombardment was reported to have been decided upon after French intelligence officers, in questioning Germans taken prisoners in Thursday's patrol operations, learned that the Germans were moving up troops into billets in the evacuated towns seven to ten miles behind the Nazi lines.

Trade Agreement Parley Quit Temporarily Until Situation Changes.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 5.—(P)—Negotiations for a trade agreement between the United States and Argentina were temporarily abandoned today.

The negotiations began last August, but had appeared hopelessly deadlocked for several days. A statement by Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantillo indicated the international situation caused the abandonment.

After an hour's conference with President Roberto Ortiz and United States Ambassador Norman Armour, Cantillo said it had been agreed to "suspend temporarily" the negotiations.

Cantillo added that during the conference "we studied the convenience of suspending the negotiations for the time being until the international situation changes."

Hore-Belisha One of Most Colorful Figures To Hold Government Post in Great Britain

His Successor, a 'Low-Brow,' Is Personal Friend of King and Queen.

By The Associated Press.

Jovial, 43-year-old Leslie Hore-Belisha, who stepped out of the British cabinet yesterday as war minister, is one of the most colorful figures ever to hold a portfolio in the British government.

The stocky, monocled bachelor, known among his colleagues as a "go-getter," perhaps is best known for his revolutionary army reforms.

He made news and braved sneers from old-fashioned soldiers by ordering a shakeup of the army council which boosted young men over the heads of their seniors.

Despite his reputation as a man of action, he became the object of an "anti-Hore-Belisha" movement early in 1939 by foes who accused him of "lack of drive."

Served in World War.
Among the complaints against him was a claim that he didn't get to his office as early as cabinet ministers should.

The robust, impeccably dressed war minister, however, usually succeeded in turning aside the recurrent criticisms.

Of Jewish descent, he was educated in Britain and France and at Heidelberg, Germany, and rose to the rank of major in the World War.

Entering parliament in 1923, he later qualified as a lawyer and earned $15,000 a year as a newspaper writer.

In 1931 he helped form the National Liberal party and became parliamentary secretary to the board of trade.

Promotions followed fast. In 1932 he became financial secretary to the treasury, minister of transport in 1934, privy councillor in 1935, and war secretary in 1937.

Oliver Stanley, who succeeds Hore-Belisha as the guiding hand of the British army, also is 43 years old, tall, lean, smiling and with prematurely gray hair.

'Low-Brow,' He Says.
As president of the board of trade, he won a reputation of having an infinite capacity for detail.

Son of Lord Derby and son-in-law of Lord Londonderry, he boasted of being a "low-brow."

In 1934, as minister of transport, he was the youngest man in the cabinet. From this post, in which he succeeded that same year by Hore-Belisha, he was appointed minister of labor.

As a World War major, Stanley won the military cross and the croix de guerre.

Born five months before King George, he and his wife are personal friends of the King and Queen.

Sir John Charles Walsam Reith, new minister of information, is a 6-footer with a jutting, battleship chin, heavy eyebrows, a dour expression and a thick Scotch burr in his voice.

That son of a United Free Church of Scotland minister, he neither smokes nor drinks and is known as a stern moralist.

He became a major in the last war and was in charge of munitions contracts for Britain in the United States in 1915 to 1918.

Sir John became the first general manager of the British Broadcasting Corporation in 1922. Last summer he was appointed chairman of Imperial Airways to drive the company's expanding transportation machine.

MacMillan a Scot.
Baron MacMillan is a tall Scot of 66.

When he met the press as minister of information he generally sat hunched up like a judge and he would talk like a judge addressing a jury. His ministry has been under fire almost from the day of its creation at the war's outbreak.

He was a conservative loud advocate in Ramsey MacDonald's cabinet and served as lord of appeal for nine years and he probably headed more investigating commissions than any other man in Britain. These commissions ranged from lunacy to commissions on international conciliation.

Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, new president of the board of trade, is a steady-eyed, big-shouldered, hard-working Scot.

A big business lawyer, he is chairman of the executive committee of the British Iron & Steel Federation and a director of the Bank of England.

Sir Andrew has served as a member of the advisory council and vice president of the Shipbuilders' Federation and as coal controller. He headed a commission sent to Nova Scotia to inquire into the coal industry there in 1925 and 1932 and was chairman of the sea fish commission of the United Kingdom 1933-1935.

The tradition-bound army could not recognize a kindred soul in the stout little man who tramped the trenches in patent leather shoes, called privates "my dear boy" and stamped white-haired brigadiers with questions on fire-power, muzzle velocity and other "new-fangled" ideas.

A Gifted Amateur.
He was what every professional soldier loathed—a gifted amateur who had learned a lot about the military business.

It didn't worry Belisha. Stanley, though named to please the army, still is not the man the military men want.

The man the officials really wanted was Major General Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the imperial general staff, whom they regarded as "the best type of British soldier." But he is an active soldier, and no soldier has held the war minister's post since Kitchen, of World War fame.

If the officers forget Belisha, the privates will remember him—for he raised the private's pay, gave him a bigger pension, and improved his living quarters.

MacMillan Under Fire.
Lord MacMillan's ministry—of necessity organized hastily at the outbreak of the war—has been under fire from the House of Commons and the press. Complaints largely were over the effectiveness of Britain's propaganda and the handling of official announcements.

In a letter accepting the resignation of Hore-Belisha, Chamberlain reaffirmed his determination to be stern in carrying on the war, saying:

"There is not now and never has been any difference between us on policy and in particular on the necessity for prosecuting the war with the utmost determination to a successful issue."

"My Dear Leslie."
Chamberlain's letter began "My Dear Leslie," and expressed "very great regret" that Hore-Belisha refused the job offered him, a place in the war cabinet as president of the board of trade.

Dapper Hore-Belisha had a quick rise to fame in three years as transport minister, during which he instituted traffic standards which became known as Belisha beacons.

Then on May 28, 1937, he was named war secretary to put new zip in Britain's army.

RED CROSS SESSION FOR CITY CANCELLED

Convention Is Shifted to Washington Because of European Conflict.

European war has caused the American Red Cross to cancel plans to hold its national convention in Atlanta in the spring, Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta chapter, was notified yesterday.

The convention was to have been held here May 12-16. National officials decided, however, that in view of war developments abroad, the convention should be held at national headquarters in Washington, beginning April 1.

The convention of the Junior Red Cross, plans for which were announced in yesterday's Constitution, will be transferred to Washington also, Dr. Boland said.

Text of the telegram from Norman H. Davis, national chairman, to Dr. Boland, announcing the agency's change in plans, follows:

"Confirming my telephone conversation with you, the exceptional pressure occasioned by the European situation has placed such an added burden upon the national officers of the Red Cross that absence from Washington for four or five days at convention time is obviously unwise. This has led to the decision that the convention be held in Washington this spring instead of Atlanta. This change has been made only after the most careful consideration."

"The Atlanta Chapter, Convention Bureau, the hotels and civic leaders of your city and state have all been so generous in prospective planning for a fine convention that it is my hope that we may again be invited to consider meeting there and when circumstances are not so diverting. You and those who have been interested will, I am sure, see the wisdom of the change of place above indicated. Appreciate your never-failing co-operation."

war started. The British generals took orders, but there have been obvious indications they didn't like it.

The feeling held by the late Marshal Haig during the World War that "the British can take care of themselves" still is present, despite victories under the united command in 1918.

Glare at Minister.
There was nothing secret about the feeling in France when Belisha visited there in November. Early last Sunday morning he gathered the war correspondents together to tell them what he had seen. Brimful of enthusiasm and energy he talked, answered questions and let the meeting run well over the half-hour allotted by the army.

In the courtyard outside the little inn where the meeting took place, Lord Gort and his staff stamped their feet in the cold November morning and glared at Belisha's back, plainly visible through a window.

When he jumped into a car after a second interview with American newspapermen and made a brief speech for the newsreels, the atmosphere was thick with unspoken criticism.

The tradition-bound army could not recognize a kindred soul in the stout little man who tramped the trenches in patent leather shoes, called privates "my dear boy" and stamped white-haired brigadiers with questions on fire-power, muzzle velocity and other "new-fangled" ideas.

The only time his department was involved in peacetime controversy was in June, 1938. A parliamentary storm started and finally blew over on a charge of Duncan Sandys, in-law of Winston Churchill, that the army under Hore-Belisha violated the rights of a member of parliament and used the official secrets act to gag members of parliament.

Hore-Belisha's letter of resignation, which sent his skyrocket political career into at least temporary shadow, said "for reasons I gave you verbally" he was unable

U. S. Warns Britain on Ships Forced Into Forbidden Zone

State Department Reveals Formal Note After American Vessel Is Brought to Scotland for Inspection; English Charged With Responsibility for Damages.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(P)—A sharp warning to Britain, holding her responsible for any damages suffered by American ships forced to proceed into the forbidden combat area for examination, was announced by the State Department today after the American vessel Mormacsun had been taken by the British into Kirkwall, Scotland.

The State Department immediately dispatched a cable to the American embassy in London, instructing the embassy to communicate with the master of the Mormacsun and send all the facts to the department for possible action.

Hull's note to Britain had said: "I feel that I should inform your excellency that this government, for itself and its nationals, reserves all its rights, and that it will be expected that compensation for losses and injuries resulting from the infringement of such rights will be made as a matter of course."

Officials said this meant, for instance, that if an American ship was sunk by a German submarine in the combat area while being escorted to a British port by a British warship, this government would look to Britain for full compensation.

That moment arrived with the receipt of dispatches saying that the 4,996-ton freighter Mormacsun of the Moore & McCormack Line, en route to Bergen, Norway, had been forced by the British to go to Kirkwall.

to accept the alternative offer. This office was not named in the documents released by officials but was known to be the Board of Trade.

Jore-Belisha worked until a late hour tonight at the war office. Finally he stepped into a waiting car at Whitehall, his path lit by a soldier with a torch.

A reporter asked if he had anything to add to the letter and he replied: "Good lord no. You have been waiting for me, dear boy, have you? Well, good-night and goodbye."

Stanley was at home, ill of influenza. The Marquis of Londonderry, Stanley's father-in-law, was taking a bath in his North Ireland home when the Associated Press notified him of his son-in-law's appointment. He expressed "warmest thanks" for the information.

Blunt MacMillan Note.
The austere former judge, Lord MacMillan, worked late at the information ministry. His letter of resignation to Chamberlain said bluntly:

"You have been good enough to tell me that impending changes which you have in view as well as the embarrassment which has been caused by the fact that I do not have a seat in the house of commons render it expedient that I should place my appointment at your disposal."

He concluded with the statement, "I shall always recall with pleasure my brief experience of office under you."

The appointments of Duncan and Reith were unusual in that neither is a member of parliament. Politicians said, however, that seats in the house of commons probably would be found for them at an early date.

The cabinet shakeup came just a week after Lord Beaverbrook's "Evening Standard" urged Chamberlain to "clear away the deadwood, particularly old stumps," in the administration.

The paper listed Stanley, named tonight to the war minister's post, as one of the administration men not possessing "the caliber for a great wartime administration."

The Evening Standard commended the war office, then headed by Hore-Belisha, but said that "failures were equally apparent."

SHAKEUP SHOWS SPLIT, SAY NAZIS
BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(UP)—German political quarters greeted the resignation of British War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha as an indication of dissension in the enemy's camp and credited it partially to the fact that he is a Jew.

Foreign unofficial suggestions that the resignation might portend peace overtures were considered unlikely by well-informed Nazis in view of other recent developments, particularly the alleged British intention to extend the theater of war to Scandinavia.

The warm southern blood of Senor Jesus Silva Herzog, manager of Mexico's official agency for operating seized oil wells, took a considerable chill in Atlanta yesterday.

He flew in from Washington about Thursday midnight, heading for the sunny homeland, only to have the flight canceled right out from under him because of the weather.

"B-r-r-r!" he announced officially and hived into a hotel room. Everything brightened up yesterday afternoon, however. The southbound senior sailed away at 2 o'clock.

SALES HIT RECORD HIGH AT MONTGOMERY WARD
CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today that sales for December and for the first 11 months of its current fiscal year were the best in the firm's history.

December sales totaled $66,020,061, an increase of $8,935,532, or 15.65 per cent, over sales of $57,084,529 in December, 1938, which were the previous peak.

Aggregate sales for the 11 months to December 31, 1939, amounted to $471,835,169, an increase of $63,790,243, or 15.63 per cent, compared with sales of $408,044,956 in the corresponding period a year ago.

RUSSIA, BULGARIA SIGN TRADE TREATY

Pact Provides Reciprocal Application of Most-Favored Nation Plan.

MOSCOW, Jan. 5.—(P)—Soviet Russia and Bulgaria today concluded a three-year trade and navigation treaty.

The treaty, which provides reciprocal application of the most-favored nation principle, was announced by Tass, Soviet official news agency.

Tass said the agreement provides "considerable extension of trade" between the two countries. Under its terms, Russia will import hogs, rice, hides, tobacco and rose oil from Bulgaria and in return export agricultural machinery, ferrous metals, oil products, fertilizers, chemicals, cellulose and cotton.

Will The Wasp-Waist Corsets Ever Become Popular?

Exercise Is Sure Way To Reduce Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain.

Since the fashion designers still insist we will all eventually, if not now, come to wear the wasp-waist corset, I thought I would ask the opinion of some one who has been wearing one steadily — Sundays excepted—for almost a year.

We've all been talking about wearing corsets like those worn 40 years ago, but Tallulah Bankhead, in her role of Regina Giddens in "The Little Foxes," has to wear one. A figure in those days meant a tiny waistline.

But what we want to know is whether these wasp-waist corsets are comfortable, do they actually slim the waistline, and will they really become popular? When sifted down, all the answers seem to be no.

Since Miss Bankhead has become accustomed to the corset, she says it rests her back and she says she misses it when she takes it off. But from what I could gather, she never misses taking it off. She does not wear one between performances nor on Sundays. And, confidentially, she thinks that all women like their freedom too much to submit to laces and stays.

So much for the comfort part! Does this pinching and squeezing actually make the waistline any slimmer? It does when you're wearing it! Well, Miss Bankhead has a lovely figure on stage and off. Nevertheless, her maid, who is probably her best critic, didn't want me to take her waistline measurement. "You don't want to measure your waist now, do you, Miss Bankhead?" she said.

"Why not?" was the demand. "Well, I think you've put on a speck of weight about your waist just since you've been in this play."

Well, that settles it. The pinching and squeezing doesn't help one to keep a slim waist. For the record, however, the Bankhead waist measures 26 inches. But she prefers it to be 25 inches and prides herself on the fact that it usually is.

These new fangled corsets seem to be a fine thing for the figure when you're wearing one. The waist is made to appear smaller. But if Miss Bankhead didn't have such a good figure, it wouldn't give her one. There is the possibility that if you were to depend on it too much, your muscles would lose their tonicity, their own ability to hold your midriff down. As I see it, the moral is: Don't expect miracles of anything but exercise!

Here's an exercise to take your waistline down—really take it down!

Position: Sitting on the floor, legs spread wide apart, arms stretched overhead with hands clasped.

Movement: Use the waist as a pivot, keeping abdominal muscles pulled up and the head between the arms, as you circle the trunk slowly in first one direction, then the other.

Send a stamped envelope to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, for the leaflet "Waistlines and Belittles."

A Favorite With The Teen-Age Miss

By Barbara Bell.

This flare-skirted, wide-shouldered fashion (1925-B) is destined to become a favorite with every growing-up young lady who is very particular about her clothes. Not only does the flare and the width have the filling-out effect that every 8 to 16 girl needs; but also the high neckline, finished with a tailored collar, and the darted waistline, add decisive flattery.

This is a style your daughter will want at once (better send for the pattern this minute) in sturdy wools or corduroy for skating and outdoor sports. Be sure to line the skirt with the jacket-blouse material, so that it will flash into view as she skims over the ice. And then she'll want it later on in sturdy cottons, like gingham, percale and calico, to finish the school term.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1925-B is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 1 1/2 yards of 54-inch material for skirt; 5-8 yard for short-sleeved jacket blouse; 1 yard for long-sleeved; 1-2 yard for collar and cuffs; 35 or 39 inches wide.

It's smart to sew your own! It's easy to do! Send for our fascinating pattern book. Choose from more than 100 new designs for all occasions and all sizes. Make your own becoming clothes, with these simple patterns. Step-by-step sew chart with each one. Price of patterns, 15c. Price of pattern book, 15c. Does not send stamps.

Girl Refuses To Return Mother-In-Law's Welcome

By Caroline Chatfield.

Yesterday I met a youngish grandmother who has twinkling eyes and the sweetest smile imaginable. "And how are the daughter and son-in-law and the lovely grandchild?"

"In Florida," she said, "and if they weren't in Florida they would be somewhere else. They are always on the go."

"Aren't you glad they are having fun while they are young?" I asked. "Yes, but I'm no better off than my friends who have no children. If I had it to do over again I wouldn't have a child. I don't see why any woman has a child."

"You spend the best years of your life bringing up your daughter and as soon as she is old enough to get married, some man comes along, takes her away from you and from there out she thinks of nothing but him and her poor old mother is forgotten."

No, no, grandmother, a daughter is a daughter all her life and no son-in-law can take her away from you. But your daughter can rob other women of her son. If you've done a good job of rearing your child, she will be yours to the end and she will see to it that her husband belongs to his mother or till the end. And what of the prize son-in-law and the precious grandchild you are so proud of?

And what of your memories of daughter's babyhood and childhood and young ladyhood. Your childhood friends haven't even the memories.

What would you say of the cruelty of life were you in this mother's shoes?

"Miss Chatfield, some weeks ago a young wife wrote you a letter defending mothers-in-law. I want to express my gratitude to her. Many of us need sympathy and understanding from outsiders since we get none from the source we expected it."

"A mother rears a fine boy, educates him, is fortunate enough to be able to give him the advantage of wide travel, places him in business and stands by ready to come to his aid if he needs her. All the while she is looking forward to the time when he will be married, give her a daughter and precious grandchildren."

"But he falls for a vain, lazy, selfish girl who is jealous of every relationship in his life that existed before he knew her. The mother in this instance can find a home in the midst of congenial friends. By extending courtesy to the daughter-in-law she can get courtesy in return. But how about her dear boy? However tactful she may be, the close tie of affection is broken. He is embarrassed before the community at being separated from his mother. His mother feels that life can be very cruel to a woman."

And so it can. Yet every mother has her memories. Life cannot rob her of her memories.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

James Roosevelt Tells Future Picture Plans

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 5.—I had a talk with James Roosevelt on his new picture-producing plans. He denies the rumor printed in a local trade paper that his recently formed "Globe Productions, Inc." has a working capital of $7,500,000 or that he will take three months off in the spring to run a campaign to put his father in the White House for a third term.

"My father has not discussed his future political plans with me," says James. As for the financing of his company—a couple of my friends have loaned me $1,000,000. It's up to me to increase it. I shall make two pictures a year—the first "The Bat" (recently purchased from Mary Pickford, and to be treated more as a comedy than as a horror picture). The second is based on the life of Horace Mann (the genius who helped give America its present public school system and the co-ed Antioch College in Ohio). "It will be," observes Jimmy, "a sort of American Mr. Chips."

Roosevelt first got the picture bug seven or eight years ago. "I used to see a lot of Joe Kennedy (now America's ambassador to England) in Florida, and he raved about the fascination of making movies. I plan to stay here for as long as they'll have me, or rather for as long as I make money. That's why I'm in this business—to make money. I love everything about the place—particularly the weather. I've never felt better in my life. When and if there is a divorce in the James Roosevelt ménage, I would guess that the action will come from his wife, from whom he is now separated."

I like Warner's idea of having the quintuplets appear briefly in the next Lane Sisters and Gale Page picture—"Four Mothers." It's a long time since we saw those five charmers. How about making another full-length picture with them, Mr. Zanuck? . . . Metro paid plenty money for Sidney Kingsley's "The World We Make"—$100,000. . . The hunt for a leading lady for "Harried, Pretty and Poor" is finally over—I think—with the part going to Anne Shirley. Star John Garfield says the role is a good one, and equal in dramatic intensity to his own. The play, by Maxwell Anderson, was successful on Broadway under the title "Saturday's Children," so the feminine part really can't be as bad as Jane Bryan and Olivia de Havilland would have us believe. (They went on "strike" rather than play it.)

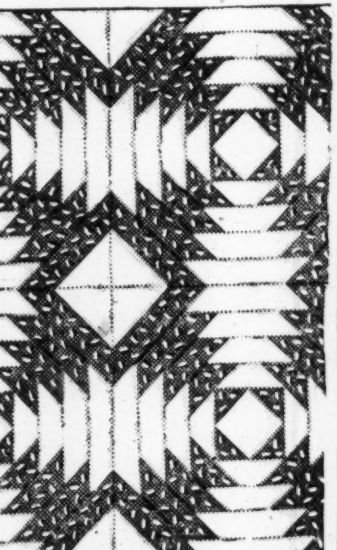

Lana Turner, who has been absent from picture-making far too long for this columnist, gets the lead in "Two Girls on Broadway," by George Murphy as her man.

Loretta Young has been definitely signed to co-star with Cary Grant in Columbia's "A Bedtime Story." This is a good break for Loretta. Her pictures have been on the mediocre side since she left the 20th Century-Fox fold. . . Talking about the latter studio, there are some big pictures planned here, among them: "Brigham Young," "End of the Trail," (the super-western), "Lillian Russell," "The Mark of Zorro," a remake of the late Douglas Fairbanks' star-tire, with Tyrone Power starring over "Maryland," and "South American Way." The latter looks like a good move to interest the South American market. . . Fay Bainter, Gene Lockhart and Beulah Bondi have the top roles in support of Frank Ruster in the screen version of "Our Town."

Walter Pidgeon has both Deanna Durbin and Kay Francis in love with him in the next Durbin movie—"It Happened in Kaloha" (originally titled "It's A Date"). . . ## Pineapple Quilt

By Alice Brooks.

She can cut her material into strips and strip off patches (that's easy cutting) and when it's done it's a choice quilt. Pattern 6584 contains the Block Chart; carefully drawn pattern pieces; directions for cutting, sewing and finishing; yardage chart; illustration of quilt.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to Household Arts Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Something unusual is a casserole of salmon, noodles and mushrooms.

Casseroles Lead Food Parade In Economy

By Sally Saver.

Casseroles lead the food parade when ease and economy are of prime consideration. A casserole steaming, bubbling and challenging those about the table to guess what it will be "when the pie is opened" is a boon to the modern housekeeper. Casseroles may be used to make left-overs appealing at the second meal; they may be created from the most inexpensive cuts with vegetables or they may be rich and tasty and party-like, set proudly upon the table at luncheon, dinner or buffet. There is no end of combinations suitable for casserole cookery. This one presented today is new and quite tasty. It makes a pretty luncheon dish, served in individual baking dishes, or quite appropriately it could be the main dish for a meatless dinner. Here is the recipe:

Salmon-Mushroom-Noodle Casserole.

1 pound can salmon.
1 6-oz. package broad noodles.
2 small onions, minced.
1 1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced,

or
1/2 cup butter or margarine.
3 tablespoons flour.
2 cups milk.
Salt and pepper to taste.

1/2 cup bread crumbs.
Flake the salmon. Cook noodles in boiling salted water for about 12 minutes. Drain and rinse in boiling water. Sauté the mushrooms and minced onion until golden brown in the butter or margarine. Make a white sauce with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, use flour and milk. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Add mushrooms, onions and flaked salmon to white sauce and pour into casserole or baking dishes. Sprinkle with crumbs, dot with remaining butter and bake in a 375-degree oven about one-half hour.

Questions about food, recipes, party menu planning and service will be answered personally by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution, Walnut 6565.

Inexpensive Slip Covers Renew Old Furniture

Yesterday an attic orphan—today an aristocrat! That's the story of the chair. A two-fabric slip-cover wrought the change—and you can make one easily, inexpensively.

The trick is to get a remnant of a lovely brocade, printed linen or a similarly handsome material and combine it with a less expensive fabric.

The slip cover uses crewel embroidery in lovely greens, reds and yellow against a natural background for the inside chair sections; for the rest of the cover, plain green linen. The skirt is smartly edged with fringe in one of the embroidery colors.

But whatever combination you choose, whether you use one fabric or two, you make your slipcover the same easy pin-on way.

Begin by smoothing material over inside back and seat, leaving a four-inch tuck-in between them. Then pin along lines of the old upholstery and cut, leaving 1 1/2 inches for seams. Similarly you fit arms, back, sides and front.

Arm fronts and wings you cut from patterns you easily make yourself. To get exact shapes, hold paper against chair, mark lines with pencil.

Next, pin pieces together, remove cover and pins, try on and stitch. If you are adding a skirt or flounce, sew it on last thing.

How to finish seams professionally? Cover cushions? Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," give a complete directions, diagrams to guide you in making slip covers for any style of chair or sofa.

Send 15c in coin for our booklet MAKING SLIP COVERS SUCCESSFULLY, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

MY DAY: White House Study Full Of Christmas Presents

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—Going up to congress yesterday crowded two things out of "My Day" which I still want to speak about. On Tuesday afternoon, at the musical, Mr. John Carter sang delightfully and Miss Anne Simpson proved to be one of the most charming dancers we have ever had at the White House. Her costumes were simply bewitching. Everyone greatly enjoyed both artists.

My mother-in-law and I attended the concert given by the Philadelphia Orchestra that same evening in Constitutional Hall. We enjoyed the marvelous orchestra, which is now conducted by Eugene Ormandy, and the additional pleasure of having Yehudi Menuhin, the violinist, play the Brahms Concerto in D with the orchestra. We had to come home before the end, because the day had been rather a long one and there was still work to be done, but both of us felt we had spent a delightful evening.

Yesterday evening I succeeded in doing some work which I had been trying to do all through the holidays, but what with gaieties and duties and sudden unexpected occurrences, I just never got around to it.

The postmaster general, Mr. Farley, dropped in for dinner last night and was, as usual, a cheerful and delightful guest. We went into the President's study after dinner and I was struck by the fact that the President still has many of his Christmas presents spread around where he can look at them. I thought that he needed a screen for his cottage, so I had one painted in New York city for him by Mrs. Helen M. Parson MacDonald. She came up to Hyde Park last summer to look at the room where it was to go, and then studied old Hudson River prints so that it would be suitable for the President's cottage, set high up on a hill overlooking the Hudson. Mrs. MacDonald's colors are lovely and I think it is one of the most successful screens I have ever seen. I am glad to say that the President seems to like it as much as I do, for he has it set up in his study so he can look at it while he waits to have it taken to Hyde Park.

My young people were augmented this morning when Mrs. Robert Baker arrived with her son, Bobby, on her way from Fall River, Mass., to Urbana, Ill. Bobby and Buzzie were thrilled to be invited by Captain Jones to lunch on the Potomac this noon.

At 3 o'clock, Sittie and the boys went with me to the christening of one of the new airplanes which inaugurates a new service by the Pennsylvania Airlines out of Washington. The children were very much interested in going over the ship after the brief ceremonies. I was interested in one or two improvements, such as the double windows which will minimize noise and keep one's vision clearer in frosty weather; the chimes instead of the buzzer to call the hostess, and the color scheme of gray and red which is really very attractive. The safety record is most impressive. They have been flying 14 years and have had no casualties to passengers or crews.

Opponents' Bids Indicate Little Strength In This Hand

By Harold Sharpsteen.

The contract is notrump. It is South's lead and South must win five of the six remaining tricks against any defense by East-West.

NORTH
S-A 7
H-4
D-J
C-K 4 2
WEST
S-K Q
H-10
D-Q
C-Q 10 9
EAST
S-10
H-8 6 5 3
D-10
C-J 8
SOUTH
S-4 3
H-A
D-9
C-A 3

WHAT TO BID?
Opponent opens the bidding with one heart. Your partner overcalls defensively with one spade. Third hand raises the opening bid to two hearts. What is your bid, in fourth position? Your holding:
S-8
H-9 7 5 4
D-8 6 4 3
C-K 10 5 3

Your answer:
A TRIPLE SQUEEZE.

South leads the Club 3 to dummy's king and returns a low club. South leads the heart ace and West, holding three winners in clubs, diamonds and spades, is squeezed in three suits.

If West discards the diamond queen, North's jack will be good. West must discard one of his black queens. If West discards the spade queen, North's ace-seven will both be good. West discards the club queen, making North's club two good.

South now leads a low spade to dummy's ace, West playing the queen. North's club two follows. South discarding the diamond nine, West discarding the spade king, retaining the diamond queen to cover North's jack.

In spite of the strong trump support for partner's hearts, pass the first round of bidding. Opponent's bids, particularly third hand's raise does not indicate much adverse strength. You may make a delayed spade raise on the next round if the bidding has not gone too high.

Til tomorrow. . . . Mail your bridge problems to

Lack of Vitamin Foods Impairs Health

By Dr. William Brady.

Plenty of misguided folk know how it feels to reduce by freak dieting. The more determined ones who do succeed in losing a few pounds that way generally look like the devil and feel like his abode.

But here's how it feels to reduce physiologically.

My dear Doctor Brady: It is about time I wrote to thank you for the benefits I have received from following your rules for reducing.

For years I suffered from a constant tired feeling caused, as I now realize, by carrying 60 pounds surplus weight.

Ever since I started reducing according to your rules I began to feel like a new person. I now have much more pep and my general health has improved a great deal. . . .

You are a joy and blessing to millions. . . . you must have wonderful patience. . . . (M. C. M.) That closing comment pleases me particularly, because so many old sourpusses seem to think I have neither patience nor human sympathy.

The principal fault with most reduction diets followed by individuals who are as fat in the head as in the body is that the restrictions imposed still further deplete the vitamin store in the body of the victim who, obviously, has been worrying along for years on a vitamin shortage, otherwise he or she would not have grown so obese. Obesity, it must be remembered, is malnutrition.

Vitamin shortage, not food shortage, accounts for the breakdown in health suffered by many misguided individuals from a period of freak dieting. Vitamin shortage, too, accounts for the let-down which comes in the second week or so of such unphysiologically adjusted dieting and defeats the most earnest intention of the overwight.

Please read again M. C. M.'s remarks in the second paragraph of the letter. "Feel like a new person," "more pep," and "general health improved." That's as it should be. A physiologically adjusted reduction regimen must make you feel better, at least no worse; it must increase your "pep" and tend to build up your health in general. Incidentally it should rather improve your appearance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Calcium.

Have been taking calcium and vitamin D as you recommended for asthma and nervousness, and have been wonderfully helped, but am told too much calcium dries up the blood.

Answer:—Generally six or eight weeks of calcium and vitamin D to supplement the diet, perhaps three such courses in the year, should suffice, but it can do no harm to take it the year around if you wish.

Who Wants $100?

I will give $100 to the first person who can prove that an oculist (ophthalmologist, eye physician) can cure diseases with eye glasses. When an oculist prescribes glasses he is quacking it, for he has no had proper training to do so. (C. H. E.)

Answer:—I believe only an oculist (ophthalmologist, eye physician) should examine the eyes and test the vision and, if necessary, prescribe or fit glasses for persons under middle age. For persons over middle age an optometrist or optician can fit glasses as well as a doctor can. In regard to your $100 reward, it would be difficult to prove that anybody can cure anything, wouldn't it?

What Stocks Did.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.

Quiet selling again tipped the stock market scales downward today and leaders lost fractions to around 2 points.

Steel, aircraft and motor leads the retreat despite moderate strength exhibited by an assortment of preferred issues and specialties.

The news, on the whole, was more optimistic than yesterday. Brokers attributed the setback mainly to the desire of some traders to hold aloof pending further light on what Congress will do about the budget and taxes, and the question of how much of a seasonal reaction may hit business during the next several months.

Marked up fractions to 2 in a Heyden Chemical, Consolidated Mining, American Gas and Electric and Aviation & Transport. Losers included American Cyanamid, United Gas and Lake Shore. Turnover of 161,000 shares compared with 179,000 Thursday.

NEW ORLEANS SPOT COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—Spot cotton closed steady, middling 11.29.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, middling 10.89.

AVERAGE PRICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(P)—The average price of middling 15-16th inch cotton today at 10.89 cents a pound; average for the past 30 market days 10.53 cents a pound. Middling 7-8th inch cotton 10.72 cents a pound.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(P)—Cotton futures lost 7 to 14 points today despite mild selling and sharp gains in foreign markets.

Here the weather one broker explained the decline:

Traders still don't know how much cotton is coming out of government loan stocks and being placed in sale in spot markets.

Most believe prices for futures (which have risen sharply lately) would cause a decisive increase in repossessions from the loan.

When loan cotton goes to market, hedging sales are made against it. Buyers aren't sure what will happen to prices if government sales should pile up. Consequently they were none too anxious to get into the market.

Exports Thursday 27,558 bales; season so far 3,302,199. Port receipts 54,633; port stocks 3,278,194.

WEEK-END LIQUIDATION

ERASES COTTON GAINS.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(P)—Week-end liquidation and hedging selling wiped out early advances in cotton futures here today.

Closing prices for futures were steady at net declines of 7 to 10 points.
